
History of the Font Santa spa

Font Santa is the only natural thermal spring in the Balearic Islands, a unique geological and cultural heritage site.

The properties of these waters were already known in Roman times. According to local tradition, after an epidemic that affected livestock, only the animals that bathed in the spring survived, attracting the interest of the population.

From the 16th century, small facilities began to be built to welcome those seeking relief and wellbeing.

From scientific study to the modern spa

In 1845, following the scientific study of its waters, the Sant Joan de la Font Santa spa was inaugurated, marking the beginning of modern spa activity, and in 1869 the waters were declared medicinal mineral waters of public utility.

In 1916 it was acquired by the Oliver family, who have maintained it to this day. Since then, Font Santa has evolved without losing its essence: a place where geology, history and wellbeing come together around a unique thermal water.
